Introduction

Our aim at Work and Income is to help people become independent by providing income support, work and training services that suit their individual circumstances.

We believe most people want to work and they can with the right support. For people who are sick, injured or disabled this means making sure they are receiving the correct income support, have access to the right services and are not missing out on training and job seeking opportunities.

We recognise that medical certificates are documents that collect sufficient information from health practitioners for Work and Income to determine entitlement for the majority of people applying for income support. However there are a number of people with complex conditions and instances where further information or clarification is required to assist us to determine entitlement.

Work and Income have established a panel of designated doctors; respected medical practitioners who provide second opinions on medical information. The provision of second opinions will assist Work and Income determine both entitlement to income support and appropriate planning interventions which will enable people to move toward work.

Role of designated doctor

Your role as a designated doctor is to provide an independent medical opinion to Work and Income.

You will usually be asked to assess people who are applying for or reviewing their entitlement to Sickness Benefit, Invalid's Benefit or Independent Youth Benefit (Sickness). You may also provide an assessment on planning for employment or training, the appropriateness of interventions and their impact on a person's capacity for work, where they consent to this.

You may also be asked to assess people who are applying for, or reviewing their medical eligibility to other benefits, eg Domestic Purposes Benefit – Care of Sick or Infirm or Child Disability Allowance.

It will also assist case managers with making a decision about whether a person applying for or receiving the Sickness Benefit should be subject to work obligations.

Relationship with General Practitioners

Work and Income recognise the important relationship between the person and their usual General Practitioner (GP). On the medical certificate we seek information to identify if the person is enrolled with the practice of the GP completing the medical certificate. If the medical certificate is sent to a designated doctor, the case manager will provide the designated doctor with the name of the person's usual GP.

Definition of 'Work'

Work and Income defines work as any suitable employment which the person is familiar with, or other types of work that the person might reasonably be expected to be able to undertake when relevant limitations are accounted for.

For the Invalid's Benefit, work refers to open employment. Open employment is any mainstream employment in the open labour market which pays no less than the minimum wage and excludes any employment designed to cater for the needs of a severely disabled person.

A person may be unable to work if:

- they are medically unable to undertake their current occupation now but will return to it soon and it would be unreasonable to expect the person to undertake alternative work in the interim, or
- returning to work would be detrimental to the person's health in the interim, or
- they are unable to do any reasonable full-time job, either for a short period of time or permanently.

Work obligations

Some people are subject to work-related obligations. They may be required to participate in a planning process and, in some circumstances, may be required to look for part-time employment (15 hours or more per week) or undertake other work-related activities such as training.

A person may be exempt from some or all of their work obligations due to temporary sickness, injury, disability or pregnancy. They are required to provide a medical certificate outlining their current incapacity and expected recovery.

Work and Income may continue to work with people for whom employment is not immediately appropriate, to prepare them to move into employment.

Types of income support

THE ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA FOR SICKNESS BENEFIT, INVALID'S BENEFIT AND INDEPENDENT YOUTH BENEFIT (SICKNESS) ARE QUITE DIFFERENT, HOWEVER THERE IS ONLY ONE MEDICAL CERTIFICATE THAT COVERS THE MEDICAL ELIGIBILITY TO THESE.

THERE ARE SEPARATE, DISTINCT MEDICAL CERTIFICATES FOR DOMESTIC PURPOSES BENEFIT – CARE OF SICK OR INFIRM AND CHILD DISABILITY ALLOWANCE, AS THESE BENEFITS REQUIRE DIFFERENT INFORMATION TO DETERMINE ELIGIBILITY.

Residency criteria for eligibility

To qualify for Sickness, Invalid's, or Independent Youth Benefit (Sickness) a person must:

- be a New Zealand citizen or permanent resident
- have continually lived in New Zealand for 2 years at any one time since becoming a New Zealand citizen or permanent resident (unless a refugee or protected person)
- usually live in New Zealand and intend to stay here.

Sickness Benefit

Sickness Benefit is paid to people at least 18 years of age who are temporarily unable to work full-time (30 hours or more per week) because of sickness, pregnancy, injury or disability. They may have a job but have needed to reduce their hours, work part-time or become unemployed.

If the person is 16 or 17 years old they must be married, in a civil union or defacto relationship and have one or more dependent children to qualify for a Sickness Benefit. A 16 or 17 year old who is single may qualify if they are pregnant or attending a recognised rehabilitation programme.

Medical certification

Applications for Sickness Benefit must be accompanied by a certificate from a:

- medical practitioner
- dentist (in relation to a dental or related condition)
- midwife (in respect of pregnancy, childbirth or related conditions).

The certificate must confirm that the person's capacity for work is affected by sickness, injury or disability and indicate the nature of that sickness, injury or disability. It must also detail the extent to which the person's capacity for work is affected and the length of time that effect is likely to last. This includes how many hours the person could work for if they have capacity to work part-time.

Work obligations

Work and Income uses the information on the medical certificate to help determine a person's capacity for work. When a person is capable of working part-time for at least 15 hours per week, they may be subject to work obligations. A person who has part-time work obligations may be required to:

- be available for, and looking for, suitable part-time employment
- accept any offer of suitable part-time employment
- undertake planning for employment
- undertake and participate in employment-related training, work experience and work assessments.

Invalid's Benefit

The Invalid's Benefit is paid to people 16 years of age or older who are permanently and severely restricted in how much work they can do because of sickness, injury or disability. This means the person's incapacity for work is expected to continue for at least two years and the person is unable to work regularly for 15 hours or more a week in open employment.

It can also mean the person has a terminal illness and is not expected to live more than two years.

People who are totally blind can also receive this benefit.

Medical certification

To decide a person's entitlement to Invalid's Benefit, they can provide:

- · a medical certificate from their medical practitioner or
- suitable existing medical or disability assessments or
- an assessment from a designated doctor if they haven't provided medical information.

Where existing information is insufficient or unavailable, an applicant for Invalid's Benefit may be required to undergo an assessment by a medical practitioner or a psychologist.

If we require a person to be assessed by a designated doctor (at application or at review of their medical entitlement) the designated doctor must certify whether, in their opinion, the applicant is totally blind or is permanently and severely restricted in their ability to work. The certificate must state the grounds on which the opinion is founded and a date for review of the permanency and/or severity.

Independent Youth Benefit (Sickness)

The Independent Youth Benefit (Sickness) is paid to young people aged 16 or 17 without dependent children who:

- can not live with their parents due to a family breakdown
- are independent
- are unable to work because of sickness, pregnancy, injury or disability.

Medical certification

Applications for Independent Youth Benefit (Sickness) must be accompanied by a certificate from a:

- medical practitioner
- dentist (in relation to a dental or related condition)
- midwife (in respect of pregnancy, childbirth or related conditions).

The certificate must confirm that the person's capacity for work is affected by sickness, injury or disability and indicate the nature of that sickness, injury or disability. It must also detail the extent to which the applicant's capacity for work is affected and the length of time the effect is likely to last.

Domestic Purposes Benefit – Care of Sick or Infirm

Domestic Purposes Benefit – Care of Sick or Infirm provides income support for a person who is caring full-time at home for a person who has a serious illness disability and who is not their spouse or partner.

The Domestic Purposes Benefit – Care of Sick or Infirm can be paid to a parent who is required to provide full-time care and attention at home to their dependent child who has a significant disability and as a result has high care needs. This benefit is not meant to be paid to parents for children who need only the levels of care required for children typical of their age.

Who qualifies?

To qualify for Domestic Purposes Benefit – Care of Sick or Infirm a person must:

- be 16 years or older
- meet the residency criteria
- provide full-time care and attention at home for another person who would otherwise need care in a hospital, rest home, residential care facility or other equivalent care.

The home can be the either the carer's or the supported person's home. A carer may live in the same house as the supported person.

Medical certification

Applications for Domestic Purposes Benefit – Care of Sick or Infirm must be accompanied by a medical certificate from a medical practitioner.

The certificate must state that the supported person needs the person's full-time care and attention and without that care the supported person would require hospitalisation, residential care or equivalent care.

Child Disability Allowance

Child Disability Allowance is a non-taxable allowance that is available to the principal caregiver of a dependent child who has a serious disability. It is paid because of the extra care that may be needed by a child who has a physical, sensory, psychiatric or intellectual disability.

To be able to receive a Child Disability Allowance a person must be 16 years or over and be the principal caregiver of a dependent child with a disability (or if there is no principal caregiver, have the care and control of the child).

The child must also meet qualifying criteria including that they:

- are a dependent child
- have a physical, sensory, psychiatric or intellectual disability
- need constant care and attention because of the disability
- are likely to need care permanently, or need care for more than 12 months
- meet the required living arrangements
- meet the residency criteria

Medical certification

To support a person's application for Child Disability Allowance, they can provide a medical certificate from a medical practitioner. However they do not need to provide a medical certificate when:

- the child is attending a special school or
- a school group or special class for intellectually handicapped children operated by Boards of Trustees (a medical certificate is required if the child is attending any other special class at an ordinary school) or
- when a child aged five years or over has been exempted from attending a normal school and is attending a special day-care centre operated by IHC.

When would a case manager refer to a designated doctor?

A case manager may consider referring a person for an assessment by a designated doctor when:

- the person's GP has indicated in the Work and Income medical certificate that they are not best placed to provide the information
- the diagnosis is unclear
- the information provided in the medical certificate or other supporting health or disability information is ambiguous or conflicting
- a previous Work and Income medical certificate contains a substantially different diagnosis or recommendation
- the person is engaged in activities that appear to be at odds with recorded incapacities or with work capacity information
- capacity for work is unclear
- there is inadequate information in the medical certificate or other supporting health or disability information to establish medical eligibility to Invalid's Benefit (where the person is applying for this benefit type)
- the person is unable to provide existing reports and/or a medical certificate
- the person is applying for Invalid's Benefit and they choose to see a designated doctor.

Referral to a designated doctor

Work and Income will refer people to you using the specific Designated Doctor Referral Form. The form will, in most cases, be completed and sent to you well before your appointment with the person, to enable you and your practice staff to:

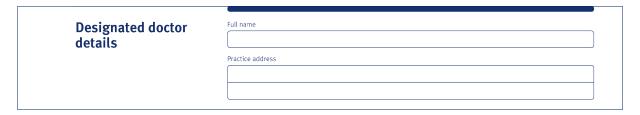

- contact the person
- confirm the appointment
- determine if reports might be required from the person's usual GP
- arrange interpreter services if required.

Client number

The client number is used by Work and Income to uniquely identify a person who is, or has been, receiving some form of assistance from us, or who qualifies for a Community Service Card. Please ensure the client number is recorded in all forms and reports.

Designated doctor details

Please ensure we have your correct details. If your details have changed, please also let the case manager making the referral know and we will arrange to change our records.

The case manager will identify the key reason for making the referral to you. It is critical that your report specifically addresses the questions raised by the case manager in the referral. You should also comment on any other issues that may be relevant to the person's eligibility for benefit or ability to work.

There are a range of reasons for a referral to a designated doctor. These include:

- A person applying for an Invalid's Benefit can request an assessment by a designated doctor.
- The Work Capacity Medical Certificate for Sickness Benefit, Invalid's Benefit and Independent Youth Benefit (Sickness), asks if the GP is the best person to complete the medical certificate. The same question is also on the medical certificate for Domestic Purposes Benefit – Care of Sick or Infirm.
- If the GP indicates that a second opinion is appropriate, then the case manager will usually make a referral to a designated doctor. In this case, an independent opinion is sought, so that Work and Income can identify the appropriate form of income support.
- A person applying for an Invalid's Benefit is encouraged to provide the case manager with existing reports, rather than requiring the person to routinely present for a new assessment by a medical practitioner. At times the available information is inadequate to establish entitlement, and so the designated doctor is asked to provide additional information that may be required to determine if the person meets the criteria for benefit.
- When the medical certificate indicates that the person has capacity for part-time work, of at least 15 hours per week, the case manager will make a decision about whether the person should be subject to work obligations. At times the medical certificate may be unclear or the case manager may have conflicting information. In these cases, the case manager may request a designated doctor assessment to provide the information needed to determine a client's capacity for work.

- The diagnosis provided by the doctor may be unclear or the information provided on the medical certificate may conflict. An example would be where the GP has indicated that the person should be able to commence planning for work or part-time work in 1–3 months, and yet indicates on the medical certificate that the person meets the criteria for Invalid's Benefit with review in 2–5 years.
- The diagnosis may indicate a mild mental illness yet the certificate is written for 13 weeks.
- A previous medical certificate may contain a substantially different diagnosis or recommendations.
 In this instance a case manager may request an assessment by a designated doctor to clarify the condition.
- The case manager may be aware that the person is undertaking activities that are at odds with the capacity for work recorded on the medical certificate. In this case the case manager will refer the person for an independent assessment of their capacity for work.
- The duration recorded on the medical certificate may exceed the expectation for this condition.
- At application or review of the Domestic Purposes Benefit Care of Sick or Infirm and the Child Disability Allowance, Work and Income may require a designated doctor to provide a medical assessment to determine medical eligibility.

There may be other situations where a case manager will refer a person to a designated doctor for an assessment and this would be recorded on the referral form as "other" with the details outlined.

Completing the Designated Doctor Report

Report form

While much of the Designated Doctor Report reflects the questions in the Work Capacity Medical Certificate, the report seeks considerably more depth in the description of the person's illness, injury or disability and the impact on the person's capacity for work. The Designated Doctor Report has a particular focus on what can be done to assist the person into work.

You do not need to complete the Designated Doctor Report for referrals relating to the Domestic Purposes Benefit – Care of Sick or Infirm and Child Disability Allowance. Instead, you will need to complete the medical certificates specific to these types of benefits.

Timeframes

In your role as a designated doctor you are expected to meet and assess the person within 10 working days of receiving a referral, and provide a completed report to the case manager within five working days of the consultation.

Requesting a Host Doctor/Usual Practitioner Report

Work and Income recognise that the client's usual practitioner often has information about the client which may not be apparent from the medical certificate. This information could be of value to the designated doctor in completing their report.

If you wish to seek additional information from the client's usual practitioner, complete a"Host Doctor /Usual Practitioner Report" and forward it to the client's usual practitioner. The form gives the host doctor the opportunity to suggest if a telephone conversation with you may be more convenient.

It is important that you maintain a written record of any information received which has a material impact on the formulation of your opinion. The date, time and essence of any telephone conversation between practitioners should be recorded. Records of such conversations can be requested by the client and are subject to the relevant privacy principles.

The Health Information Privacy Code 1994 and the Privacy Act 1993 have specific rules regarding the situations where personal information can be withheld from a client. If you are unclear whether information can be withheld in a particular case please feel free to discuss your concerns with the Principal Health and Disability Advisors of Work and Income.

For a usual practitioner to be paid, they must receive a request for information from the designated doctor using the Host Doctor/Usual Practitioner Report form. Work and Income will pay for telephone conversations, provided the call was prompted through the receipt of a Host Doctor/Usual Practitioner Report.

Discussion with the person

Work and Income encourages you to discuss your report with the person. Clinical information collected by Work and Income is governed by the Privacy Act and so is discoverable by the person. They have the right to request access to and correction of, any information that we hold on file about them.

To see a Host Doctor/Usual Practitioner Report, please see Appendix 1.

The following section provides a guide to the completion of the Designated Doctor Report.

Please ensure the client number is recorded in all forms and reports.

Please ensure the name and contact details of the case manager who made the referral are completed. If they have not completed these details, their name and contact details should be copied from the referral letter.

Your completed report should be returned to this case manager. If you have any concerns or need clarification on the reason for referral, please discuss these queries with the case manager identified on the referral.

Client details

Please ensure the person's details are recorded on the form. This information will normally reflect the information provided on the medical certificate and on the referral form from the case manager.

You are asked to take note of the person's previous occupation. This information provides context to your later comments on the person's capacity for work.

Where the person has not previously held a job, "No previous occupation" will be recorded.

Please indicate in Question 1 if the person is blind. Note the person must meet one or both of the following criteria:

- the best visual acuity (sharpness), with correcting lenses, does not exceed 3/60 or 1/20 and/or
- the visual field is contracted to a maximum of five degrees on either side of the fixation point.

If the person is blind as defined above, they may have an entitlement to Invalid's Benefit irrespective of the number of hours they are able to work or the income they receive from their employment.

If a person is not blind as defined above, but is both permanently and severely restricted in their capacity for work because of visual impairment, they may have entitlement to Invalid's Benefit.

Question 2 seeks to identify the nature of the primary conditions that have given rise to the person's incapacity for work. Codes should be listed in order of their impact on the person's capacity for work, starting with the most significant.

Some examples may include:

- · physical or medical conditions
- · mental health conditions
- loss of function or body part.

Question 3 focuses on other conditions that compound the person's capacity for work. Some examples may include:

- long term health conditions
- chronic pain
- obesity
- cognitive impairment
- substance abuse.

To help us understand how we can assist the person into work, or if work is a reasonable outcome, we need to understand both the primary medical condition and also what other factors may impact on the person's capacity for work.

4.	Is the impact of the condition on the person's capacity for work likely to fluctuate or be intermittent?
	No Yes

Where the person's condition is likely to fluctuate, deteriorate or be intermittent, Work and Income will take this into account when determining the most appropriate income support or services for the person. While the person may present well at a particular interview, the case manager needs to realise this may not represent the person's usual state of health or ability.

5.	Please provide any additional diagnosis details below:

Please provide any other information that may help determine the person's entitlement to benefit.

Current treatment or intervention

	7.	What treatment or intervention(s) is the person currently receiving?
		Intervention	Provider	Expected date of completion

It is important for Work and Income to know when a person is accessing treatment as this may have an impact on their ability to participate in work or planning, and on the types of work they can do. However, many treatments can happen concurrently with work or work-related activities.

For example, where a person is undergoing intensive treatment such as chemotherapy, adjusting to a new management routine or awaiting imminent surgery, their readiness for work may be substantially reduced.

(Q8) Do the conditions listed in Question 2 limit the person's capacity to work for 30 hours or more per week?

This question helps Work and Income to assess eligibility for a medical-related benefit or an exemption from work obligations due to sickness, injury, disability or pregnancy.

Work and Income consider a person to be able to undertake regular employment if they are able to work 15 or more hours per week. If it is likely that the person's medical condition or disability only prevents them from working 15 or more hours in some weeks, or they are only able to do this some weeks due to a temporary improvement in their medical condition, then they would not be considered able to undertake regular employment.

(Q9) Do the conditions listed in Question 2 limit the person's capacity to work regularly in open employment for 15 hours or more per week?

This question helps Work and Income to assess eligibility for a medical-related benefit or an exemption from work obligations due to sickness, injury or disability.

Open employment is defined as any mainstream employment in the open labour market which pays no less than minimum wage and excludes any employment designed to cater for the needs of a severely disabled person.

(Q10) When is the person likely to be capable of:

-6 months	likely in less han 1 year

Work and Income is asking your opinion on the person's capacity for work. This will be used to determine their entitlement for benefit and their ability to meet obligations. It is also used to inform the provision of supports to assist the person into work.

It is expected that most people's ability to work will improve, allowing them to progress towards employment. Although it is not possible to determine the exact date on which a person will be able to start work, we are asking you to indicate what you think their likely progress will be.

In completing this section, please tick the appropriate boxes to show at what stage Work and Income should start to consider that the person may be able to undertake suitable work or work-related activities.

When indicating capacity for planning, training or work, please focus on the person's condition and its impact on their capacity for work; not their ability to gain employment or on other factors such as literacy or the availability of childcare. In determining a person's ability to work, you should consider the person's abilities without reference to local labour market conditions. If a person requires assistance to get a job, Work and Income have a range of services available to support people into work.

Although the person may focus on their previous employment, we are interested in their ability to undertake any type of work that they could reasonably be expected to do, given their relevant restrictions.

Where the person is able to work but is unable to find a job, they may be entitled to another benefit or range of other support and assistance.

(Q11) The person is unable to work from:

Work and Income will use this information when working out the date from which any assistance should commence.

For the first medical certificate, the date should be when the person's illness, injury or disability first stopped them from being able to work.

For subsequent medical certificates, it should be the date the person's entitlement was to be reviewed by Work and Income. This is typically the date indicated on the person's reassessment letter.

Before the person's entitlement is due to cease, Work and Income sends the person a letter indicating that it is time to reassess their entitlement. The letter indicates the date on which entitlement ceases and suggests actions that may be appropriate. One action is for the person to return to their practitioner for a further medical assessment if they think they are unable to work.

(Q12) When should the person's capacity for work next be assessed?

of their medical condition, or the date indicated on the client's	2.	When should the person's capacity for work next be assessed?
re-assessment letter.		Day Month Year 2 years 5 years Never
		Day Month Year

Please indicate when you believe the person should next have their capacity for work medically reassessed. The date recorded here should be based on the person's condition and be independent of Work and Income's set periods for reviewing Sickness Benefit eligibility.

Please note that it may be necessary for person's medical eligibility to a benefit to be reassessed prior to the date specified on the medical certificate. However, the information you record here provides useful information for Work and Income when considering planning with the person for work.

The impact on capacity for work is likely to last for longer if the person has a permanent and severe sickness, injury or disability. In these cases, the need for assessment may be infrequent and you can indicate a reassessment period of:

- 2 years
- 5 years
- never.

Please select the "never" option where the person has a severe and permanent disability which is unlikely to change or which will deteriorate over time.

When indicating duration of incapacity, please focus on the person's condition and not their ability to gain employment. Although the person may focus on their previous employment, we are interested in their ability to work in a range of jobs, not simply their former position.

In determining a person's capacity for work, you should consider their abilities without reference to local labour conditions, even though you understand that there may be limited jobs available or no employer likely to offer the person a position.

Where the person is able to work but unable to find a job, they may be entitled to another type of income support or range of services and assistance.

Work planning

Work planning actively engages the person in the process of identifying the steps and services required for them to move into work. These may include health services such as PATHS, but could also include vocational, educational, social, cultural, environmental or legal services.

For people on Sickness Benefit, Independent Youth Benefit (Sickness) and Invalid's Benefit, work planning may include a vocational assessment to identify likely employment options.

Training

While a person may not be ready or able to start work, they may be able to undertake training. Training may include:

- secondary school (for 16 and 17 year olds)
- · vocational training or retraining
- literacy skills.

Indicate if the person is able to undertake limited training (less than 15 hours per week) and/or training for longer periods (at least 15 hours per week).

Part-time work

When a person is capable of working part-time, they may continue to be eligible for a benefit. It depends on the benefit type as to how working part-time will affect the person's benefit.

Please indicate if the person is able to undertake limited part-time work (less than 15 hours per week) and/or part-time work for longer periods (at least 15 hours per week).

Full-time work

Work that is 30 hours or more per week is defined as full-time work.

When a person is able to work 30 hours or more per week, they are expected to be in work. However, if they are able to work full-time they may be eligible for other assistance from Work and Income. For example, where a person is able to work 30 hours or more per week and are looking for work, they may receive Unemployment Benefit with the associated obligations to actively seek employment.

Work and Income will consider all the information provided on the medical certificate when determining if the person will qualify for assistance.

The "Factors which impact on capacity for work" table has been compiled from a range of national and international evidence on factors that impact on a person's ability to work.

The factors are clustered into five areas – vocational, educational, health, personal, legal and environmental barriers to work.

Please tick all those areas that you believe are a material barrier to the person entering employment.

You are then asked to indicate the most significant factors into the report and comment on how these specific factors impact on the person's capacity for work.

For more information on 'Factors which impact on capacity for work', refer to Appendix 2.

		Impairment Impact on the person's ability to work

Answers to these questions are not mandatory as they relate to planning, however they are important when considering the person's pathway into employment. Please ensure the person is happy for you to complete this section.

Having identified the factors which impact on the person's capacity for work, we are now seeking your advice on what treatment or intervention could best address these factors.

The treatment or intervention may be provided as part of Work and Income's work related service – such as education and training, or vocational services.

It may also be an employment focussed service such as Providing Access to Health Solutions (PATHS) or a Targeted Health Intervention (THI).

- PATHS is an employment-focused programme targeted to people with complex health and disability needs who want to work. PATHS is available in selected DHB regions and involves a partnership between Work and Income, a DHB or PHO and a community mental health agency.
 - The PATHS programme facilitates access to services tailored to the person's needs this may include health interventions or other services where these would otherwise not be available.
- THI is funding to assist people access health interventions within 3 months in areas where PATHS and other health and disability services are not available. The person needs an offer of full-time ongoing employment and must be unable to access the treatment from other publicly funded sources.

Work and Income will consider the cost and likely benefit of the intervention and, following discussion with the Regional Health Advisor or Regional Disability Advisor, determine if it would be appropriate for Work and Income to fund the service.

Regional Health Advisors and Regional Disability Advisors are responsible for providing advice and recommendations on health and disability factors associated with client applications for benefit and on service options for the client.

Work and Income need to be able to make judgements on whether the suggested interventions will assist people into work. Where interventions are likely to result in the person being ready for work, Work and Income may be in a position to fund the intervention (subject to the person meeting the criteria for the service).

18.	What residual impairment do you think the person will have in 2 years time?
	Impairment	Impact on the person's ability to work

People with a permanent impairment may require reasonable accommodations to enable them to enter employment. Employment co-ordinators can work with the person and their potential employers to implement these modifications.
